with English equivalents. There was some reason for speaking of the late Chinese Minister to England as the Marquis Tseng. for he was actually the possessor of the title Hou, inherited from his father and conveniently rendered by our English word Marquis. But it was ridiculous to assume that because the sons and daughters of an English Marquis are called by courtesy Lord This and Lady That, therefore the sons and daughters of the Marquis Teeng should follow a rule unknown in China and figure as Lord Kingeast. Lady Blossom, and so on. It is at least equally absurd to speak of the son of the Vicercy Li Hung-chang, who is now Chinese Minister at Tokio, as Lord Li." Even the father is not referred to as an Earl, though he owns the title Po, and the son has assuredly no claim whatever to the singular distinction accorded him. A kindred want of accuracy and propriety is shown when, as frequently happens, the Chinese Minister to England and Foreign Ministers at Peking are spoken of as Ambassadors, and their residences as Embassies instead of Legations. The title Excellency is also sown rather more broadcast than it ought to be. The only British officials in these parts who can properly claim it are the been injured by the fall of a scaffolding at On Bombay-Naval Commander in chief and the Gover- the Travellers Club in Pall Mail. nor of Hongkong.
